ABOUT ME

I am a Philadelphia-based mixed-media artist working under the name Lee in Cerulean. My art centers on texture, minimalism, and imperfection, using joint compound, acrylic paint, and unconventional tools to create layered surfaces defined by organic lines and subtle movement. I earned my Bachelor of Fine Arts from the Art Institute of Seattle and have exhibited my work at galleries, artist pop-ups, and charitable events across Philadelphia. My work is recognized for its calm, tactile quality and its focus on embracing what is natural, uneven, and intentionally unrefined.
